OTHER BODIES AUTHORISED TO RECEIVE A WHISTLEBLOWING REPORT

If the whistleblowers have justified concerns that the ZSE Group would not verify their whistleblowing report objectively, they can legally contact also bodies authorised by law to receive whistleblowing reports.

These are: Whistleblower protection office (I want to make a report - Whistleblower protection office - oznamovatelia.sk), public prosecutor's office or administrative body authorised to act, or institutions, bodies, offices or agencies of the European Union.

RECEIVING AND RECORDING WHISTLEBLOWING REPORTS IN LINE WITH THE LAW

The person responsible will register and record all received whistleblowing reports in a special registry, emphasising the protection of the whistleblower's identity and confidentiality in line with applicable laws. When the whistleblowing report is delivered, the person responsible shall notify the whistleblower of the receipt without undue delay within seven days.

VERIFICATION OF WHISTLEBLOWING REPORTS IN LINE WITH THE LAW

In the ZSE Group, whistleblowing reports are verified by the person responsible, in cooperation with the investigation committee. Throughout the entire investigation process, confidentiality regarding the whistleblower's identity, affected persons' identity, and findings is strictly observed. If the whistleblowing report must be supplemented with further information or proofs, the responsible person will immediately contact the whistleblower. A summary of the investigation will be submitted to the employer's management. Along with the summary, the management will receive proposed recommendations and corrective measures (if applicable) to remedy the situation and prevent reoccurrence of unwanted situations (e.g. recommended organisational changes, changes in IT systems, accountability of persons who breached the regulations, etc.).

PROTECTION OF THE WHISTLEBLOWER'S IDENTITY AND INFORMING THE WHISTLEBLOWER

If, after the evaluation by the person responsible, the whistleblowing report is to be submitted to authorities, the person responsible shall ensure protection of the whistleblower's identity in line with the law. The whistleblower's consent is needed to submit the report to authorities; should the whistleblower refuse to grant such consent, anonymised report will be submitted.

WHISTLEBLOWER PROTECTION FORESEEN BY THE LAW (Sections 3, 5 12 of the Act)

Protected whistleblower status according to the law (Sections 3 and 5 of the Act)

Whistleblowers can apply for protection, called 'protected whistleblower status', from a prosecutor or administrative authority when reporting a violation.

If the prosecutor or administrative authority approve the whistleblower's application and grant him/her a protected whistleblower status, this means that the employer can take no action against the whistleblower against his/her will without consent from the Whistleblower protection office.

Protected whistleblower status pursuant to the Act shall cease to exist:

- a) when the Whistleblower protection office receives the protected whistleblower's written notice of waiver of the protection,
- b) on termination or cessation of the protected whistleblower's employment relationship,
- c) on the lapse of three years from the termination of the criminal proceedings or administrative offence proceedings; however, the protection shall not cease to exist if the criminal proceedings are terminated by the referral of the case to another authority,
- d) on conviction of the protected whistleblower of the criminal offence of false accusation or the criminal offence of perjury in connection with making a qualified whistleblowing report; or
- e) on receipt by the employer of a written notice from the authority that provided the protection, if it is proven that the qualified whistleblowing report is not an act in good faith.

Suspension of an employment-related measure according to the law (Section 12 of the Act)

The Act also allows the whistleblowers the so-called subsequent protection consisting of suspension of the effectiveness of an employment-related measure already taken against the whistleblower.

The whistleblower must submit the application to the Whistleblower protection office within 15 days from learning of such employment-related measure. If the Whistleblower protection office approves the application and suspends the effectiveness of the employment-related measure, the whistleblower is to deliver a petition for a preliminary injunction to the court (Section 12 of the Act). The whistleblower may also request free legal aid from the Centre for Legal Aid. In these cases, the whistleblower is entitled to legal help even if he/she is not in material poverty (Section 20 of the Act).

Whistleblower according to the law

Pursuant to Section 2 of the Act, the whistleblower is a natural person who, in good faith, makes a whistleblowing report to an authority competent to receive whistleblowing reports (Whistleblower protection office, public prosecutor office or administrative body) or to the employer.

Beyond that, the whistleblower is also a person who, in good faith:

- 1. makes a whistleblowing report and their employment relationship or another equivalent relationship has been terminated, if such person has become aware of information about the misconduct harmful to the society during such employment relationship or another equivalent relationship (volunteering, internship, vendor contract, etc.),
- 2. makes a whistleblowing report and their employment or other equivalent relationship has not yet come into existence, if such person has become aware of information about the misconduct harmful to the society during the selection procedure or in the context of pre-contractual relations,
- 3. made a whistleblowing report anonymously and their identity was revealed,
- 4. has disclosed information about the misconduct harmful to the society, which has come to their knowledge during the selection procedure or in the context of pre-contractual relations, and such person's employment relationship or another equivalent relationship has not yet come into existence, or during the employment relationship or another equivalent relationship or after the termination of the employment relationship or another equivalent relationship.

The whistleblower may apply for legal protection only if he/she discloses the information because:

- 4a. he/she has made a whistleblowing report via the internal system for the investigation of whistleblowing reports and has not been notified of the outcome of the investigation, or no appropriate measures have been taken, and has subsequently made such whistleblowing report to an authority competent to receive whistleblowing reports and has not been notified of the status of the investigation or the outcome of the investigation in due course,
- 4b. he/she has made a whistleblowing report to an authority competent to receive whistleblowing reports and has not been notified of the status of the investigation or the outcome of the investigation in due course,
- 4c. there is a reasonable concern that the misconduct harmful to the society may constitute an imminent or obvious threat to the public interest, or
- 4d. there is a reasonable concern that such person would be subject to a retaliation if they made the whistleblowing report to an authority competent to receive whistleblowing reports or, in the specific circumstances of the case, there is a threat that the authorities competent to receive whistleblowing reports would fail to ensure an impartial and independent investigation of the facts set out in the whistleblowing report.

OTHER OPTIONS OF PROTECTION AGAINST THE EMPLOYER'S POSSIBLE RETALIATION

According to the law, other persons may also apply for protection if they face retaliation due to a whistleblowing report made by someone else. They can be:

- a) a close person of the whistleblower,
- b) natural person - entrepreneur or a legal person which the whistleblower controls, in which the whistleblower has an interest, in which the whistleblower holds an office as a member of a body of the legal person, or for which the whistleblower performs an employment activity,
- c) a natural person - entrepreneur or a legal person which controls the legal person in which the whistleblower has an interest or in which the whistleblower holds an office as a member of a body of the legal person,
- d) a person who provided assistance to the whistleblower in relation to the whistleblowing report; and
- e) the person responsible or a person involved in the performance of the tasks of the person responsible.

Retaliation may comprise various actions by the employer, including dismissal, suspension of activity, disciplinary measure, change of location of place of work, non-award of the bonus, coercion, intimidation, harassment, non-prolongation of employment for an indefinite period, early termination of the contract, etc.

If such person believes that e.g. dismissal or other employment-related measure taken against him/her by the employer is a retaliation for the submitted whistleblowing report (and he/she is the whistleblower's relative or provided aid to the whistleblower), he/she can contact the Whistleblower protection office (petition for suspension of the effect of employment-related measure under Section 12 of the Act) or petition the court for the correction or compensation of non-property damage.

Every whistleblower or above stated person may also ask the Whistleblower protection office to start a proceeding on misdemeanour or a proceeding on imposing a fine against the employer.

The Whistleblower protection office may impose a fine on a person who:

- a) threatens to retaliate, attempts to retaliate, or retaliates against a whistleblower in connection with making or publishing a whistleblowing report,
- b) breaches the non-disclosure obligation with regard to the identity of the whistleblower or the identity of the person concerned; or
- c) attempts to hinder or hinders the making or publishing of a whistleblowing report. If the culprit is proven guilty, it is a misdemeanour as per Section 18 of the Act on Protection of Whistleblowers.

The Whistleblower protection office may also impose a fine on the employer who takes employment-related measure against the whistleblower without the consent of the Whistleblower protection office, where such consent is required, or if the employer threatens to retaliate, attempts to retaliate, or retaliates against the whistleblower or other persons.
